CHARITY COMMITTEE
FINDS MUCH TO DO

Since the recent financial depression has overtaken our district the Charity Committee of the Board of Trade has not been inactive in fulfilling its responsibility towards any worthy cases that were found to be in need of help.

Notwithstanding the fact that every possible provision has been made for the support of families by retaining employment for them, many calls are made on this Committee, and details of conditions are often related which are unknown to the public generally. While it is not always easy to determine what course to take for the best interests of those who are in perfecting circumstances, temporary aid is given whenever necessary until better conditions can be brought about. Employment is secured for such people whenever it is possible to do so, and the Secretary shall be glad to be notified where temporary or permanent employment can be obtained for anyone.

Shoes and clothing that are in fairly good repair will be gladly accepted. Many of the school-children, in the Mexican families principally, are in need of better clothing. There are very many destitute Mexican families in the District at the present time. These families consist usually of the mother and a number of small children, who are without any visible means of support, and the problem of caring for them properly presents many difficulties.

The Charity Committee of the Board of Trade has always been loyally supported in its work among the needy of the district, and every effort is now being made to co-operate in helping all worthy cases to the best advantage of the recipients and with as much discretion as possible.

REPORT ENGINEERS
MAKING SURVEY FOR CHARLESTON DAM

Would Cost Over Two Millions and Would Prove a Valuable Asset to Cochise County—Located on San Pedro River

Word has reached Bisbee to the effect that a corps of government engineers in the employ of the reclamation service is in the vicinity of Charleston, this county, presumably to make a preliminary survey of the proposed irrigation dam at that point.

Considerable effort has been manifested within the past year toward the end of interesting the government of the importance of this dam on the San Pedro river, which, when constructed, would prove a valuable asset to Cochise county in reclaiming thousands of acres of land, which now are of little or no use other than for grazing purposes.

It is estimated that the dam would cost in the neighborhood of about two million dollars and would irrigate more than three thousand acres of land.

COBB IS BOOSTING ROAD BOND CAUSE

State Engineer Lamar Cobb is in the city to confer with his assistant, J. C. Ryan, concerning state road work in this county. It was proposed by Mr. Ryan that a concrete bridge be built across Whitewater creek to replace the wooden one opposite the Calumet & Arizona smelter, which is not long enough to allow all the flood water that comes at times to pass through, thus resulting in flooding the

REVIEW SCRIBE
TAKES TRIP OVER
"HANGING ROAD"

The New State Highway Near Bisbee Is Most Magnificent and Picturesque in the Entire West Say State Engineers

(By Oscar K. Goll)

Three and nine-tenths miles of the great "Hanging Road" over the Divide between Bisbee and Tombstone have now been completed. Next to the mines and smelters this magnificent and picturesque mountain boulevard is easily the most interesting feature of Cochise county.

This road will form a part of the state highway system which Arizona proposes to construct.

Coming from Tombstone the contrast between the ordinary Arizona road and those stretches of state highway now completed is brought vividly to one's attention.

The pleasure that the automobilist feels when he strikes the state highway is one that he long remembers.

A steep grade of a full mile and a half fronts him, but what matters that when his big rubber tires take a determined, biting grip on the macadamized roadbed, as smooth as a ballroom floor.

Dotting the roadway with surprising frequency are culverts of solid and impressive masonry, each provided with wing or diversion walls to direct the eroding torrential flood waters through their proper channels. At the outlet of each culvert is an apron or spillway of enduring concrete against which harmlessly discharge the tremendous cataracts of water incident to the heavy mountain rains and cloudbursts.

Your huge, high-powered, throbbing straining and pulsating machine by now has reached the apex of the Divide, where the tourist finds himself confronted by a panoramic view of surpassing loveliness. At this spot, to one side of the road, he will descry a concrete monument dedicated to the builders of the road. Some of the names are illegible, due to the scaling of the material, but those of Lamar Cobb, state engineer, and J. C. Ryan, the latter of whom has been in immediate charge of the work in Cochise county, are easily decipherable.

Away off in the distance, to one corner and apparently a mile below, one catches a glimpse of Bisbee.

Here's where one appreciates not only the beauty but the danger of this altitudinous mountain highway. A little swerving to one side and it will be a case of a few lines in the newspapers.

But from here on there's no more climbing. Just simple coasting or volplaning into Bisbee.

The sensation is delightful and restful as your whirling and purring spirals of the descent into Bisbee.

The towering, massive rocks on one side of the road suggest the eternal, while the sheer, yawning, abyssal and chasmed depths on the other side savor of eternity.

The "Hanging Road" is undoubtedly the best constructed piece of highway in the state of Arizona, and it will not be a bad day for the state when the whole system of which this road is designed to form a part, shall have been completed.

LEAVING FOR ENGLAND
TO JOIN ALLIES ARMY

Mr. and Mrs. George Gaitskell Are Departing for Their Old Home

Mr. and Mrs. George Gaitskell, long time residents of this district, are leaving today for their former home in England. En route east they will stop for a short time at Chicago, Ill., where they will visit with friends and relatives prior to going to New York, where they will take boat. It is probable that Mr. Gaitskell will join the volunteer forces on his arrival in the old country, and that he will go to the front with the Allied forces. They have not determined as yet if they will return to the United States again, or not, but they are not considering a return seriously at the present time.

Mr. and Mrs. Gaitskell have been in this district several years, and during their residence have made many friends and acquaintances. On leaving they have been unable to see all their friends and wish to extend to them their best wishes and thank them for the courtesies received at their hands during their stay in Bisbee.

LATEST MAP OF COCHISE COUNTY
IS COMPLETED

Fills Long Felt Want and Is One of Most Complete Ever Made—Is Result of Great Many Months of Very Difficult Labor

It was ascertained yesterday that Deputy U. S. Mineral Surveyor J. A. Rockfellow of Tombstone has received from the east his latest map of Cochise county, and the same will shortly be on the market for prospective purchasers.

This new map of Cochise county fills a long felt want, it being the first to be issued in many years, a staid old map adopted by the board of supervisors some years ago has become obsolete, owing to the many new roads, changes made in the county highways, new judicial and voting precinct being established, etc.

The new map just completed is up-to-date and contains all the latest railroads, towns, cities, mines and ranches. The Borderland Route is there in big letters, and the only drawback, the professor states, was giving a complete record of the wagon roads in the county, owing to changes being made from time to time. However the map is one of the best compilations yet, and represents weeks and months of labor. It was drawn by Clyde R. Seltz and Edwin R. Wash.

"FOREIGN LEGION" IS ROMANTIC BAND OF MEN OF ADVENTURE

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The French "foreign legion," that interesting institution so frequently made to figure in romance, is receiving almost daily mention in the war despatches. A history of the legion and its position in international law is all the more interesting at the present time, since the recent enlistments include not only Italians and those of other European nationalities, but also a number of Canadians and Americans who were unable for one reason or another to join the regular forces of the Allies.

The employment of foreign troops is a common episode in military history, but the general term "foreign legion" which has come to be usually, though rather loosely applied to the "regiments strangers" in the French service, has stood, not for troops sold into foreign service as were the Hessians who fought under the British flag in the American revolution, but for "irregular volunteer bodies of foreign sympathizers raised by states at war."

The French "foreign legion" is composed of adventurous spirits of all nationalities—including most numerous, by however, the French themselves—and its chief service heretofore has been in the French colonies. Its present organization dates back to a law of 1851, passed for the purpose of giving aid and a definite status to foreign refugees on French soil, particularly veteran soldiers left from the fusion of numerous foreign regiments created by Napoleon at the time of his return from Elba.

After the war with Prussia in 1870 a further reason was added, at least from the French point of view, for the existence of the legion. The French could not make places in the regular national army for those inhabitants of Alsace-Lorraine who refused to serve the German flag, since this was expressly prohibited in the terms of the treaty of Frankfurt. The French held, however, that they had a right to incorporate in the "foreign legion" deserters and Alsatians who declined to submit to German rule.

In practice, up to the beginning of the present war, the "foreign legion" has been recruited through voluntary enlistments for five years, and reenlistments for from one to five years, undertaken by foreigners, "or by the French serving under the title of foreigners. No evidence has been required of the recruit to show that he is over eighteen and the system has always been on the order of "no questions asked." Under these terms a force of nearly 15,000 men has been easily maintained, the average enlistment amounting to about 2,000.

Because the "foreign legion" has been employed so much in the colonial service in recent years the idea has become rather general that it was purely a colonial force. But this idea is incorrect, since the legion has been employed in general warfare a number of times before the present conflict in which it promises to play a conspicuous part. In 1856 the two foreign regiments conducted themselves so brilliantly and bravely in the Crimea that French citizenship was accorded at a stroke to all who fought it. Again in 1858 the two foreign regiments took part in the bloody campaign which Napoleon III. waged against Austria in behalf of Italy. And in the Franco-Prussian war the foreign troops, after having supposedly eliminated the Germans, were ordered to France, and at Tours, when Paris had been besieged, there was a reorganization of all foreigners eager to fight under the French flag. But it is said the Germans were able to introduce spies into the organization, some of whom the authorities at Tours were blind enough to commission as French officers.
